

MEN AND HOUSEHOLD RESPONSIBILITIES – INDIAN CONSUMER – 2022

Encourage Indian men to be more involved in household responsibilities by making it a more gender-neutral topic and providing convenient ways to complete tasks.

A Mintel Analyst, Global Analyst

Men And Household Responsibilities - Indian Consumer - 2022

This report looks at the following areas:

- Key trends in male consumer perceptions and biases towards household work
- The barriers towards household work as perceived by male consumers
- Male consumers' reasons for doing household chores
- Enablers to encourage men to do household work
- Opportunities for brands to enable male consumers to participate in household chores

Encourage Indian men to be more involved in household responsibilities by making it a more gender-neutral topic and providing convenient ways to complete tasks.

Overview

Despite the fact that men and women are increasingly sharing domestic responsibilities, it is still the woman who is primarily responsible for household chores. The notion that women should shoulder the majority of domestic responsibilities is still widely held in most of India.

As the pandemic took hold and lockdowns were implemented across the country, the conversation about men and household responsibilities became a major topic. With paid domestic help suddenly unavailable, economic and financial concerns arose, as did the burden of household responsibilities for families stranded at home.

When it comes to doing chores, men, on the other hand, have several mental barriers. For example, 31% of men believe that the image of household products is overly feminine. Brands can change the gender stereotypes of household work and responsibilities by promoting a more gender-neutral agenda.

With the pandemic still ongoing and new waves of COVID-19 emerging, financial constraints on households will persist, making price sensitivity critical for brands. There is concern that during lockdowns, the burden on women in the household increases. When the pandemic is over and normalcy returns, it is unclear whether the shift in men's attitudes towards household responsibilities will last.
